

IMPENETRABLE CENSORSHIP IS ABOUT ROUMANIA

Dramatic Events Involving King Carol II Are Today Screened

STOP COMMUNICATION

Princess Helen Has Nervous Breakdown After Threatening to Leave

BERLIN, June 10.—(INS)—A seemingly impenetrable wall of censorship surrounded Roumania today, screening the dramatic events in the struggle involving the new King Carol II, his divorced wife, Princess Helen, and the Crown Prince Michael, their 9-year-old son, who last week was king.

Telegraph and telephone communications between Bucharest and other continental capitals have been blocked since late yesterday afternoon. The only regular communications to reach Vienna, Budapest and Belgrade have been brief, semi-official and colorless reports dealing with political and government affairs, but saying nothing of the bitter feud between Carol and Helen over Michael.

Reports reaching Budapest late last night through special channels from Bucharest confirmed the news which reached the world before the censorship, which had been partial, became complete.

A summary of available reports follows:

1. Princess Helen, proud and bitter, refused conciliation.
2. King Carol presented an ultimatum to Helen to resume marital relations and consent to an annulment of their divorce, otherwise, he threatened to bring Mme. Lupescu to Bucharest.

3. King Carol seized his son Michael and brought him to Cotroceni Palace and Helen was forced to consent to Carol's assumption of the direction of Michael's education, as Crown Prince.

4. Princess Helen had a nervous breakdown after threatening to leave the country.

COMMUNICATION

Churchville, Pa., June 7, 1930.
Editor of the Courier:

The W. C. T. U. wrote to the leading college presidents asking their opinion of the recent charges that drinking conditions are bad at colleges and received overwhelming assurance that student sobriety is the rule and that college conditions are thoroughly safe.

At the time this statement is made 246 college presidents have replied, of these 140 say there is less drinking than before prohibition; 44 say there is no drinking at their colleges; 46 say there is not now and never was any but the most casual drinking among their students and that it is out of line with their college customs and traditions; six say there is not much change as to drinking since prohibition; seven say conditions are bad; and only three say that there is more drinking than before prohibition.

Almost every state university president declares there is less drinking than ever; and the great mass of testimony from the colleges with strong moral and church background is reassuring to the most exacting parents.

From the few colleges which admit there is student drinking the presidents who replied to the W. C. T. U. questionnaire indicate that there is less drinking than there was prior to prohibition.

Blame for student drinking is placed squarely on the shoulders of parents and the older generation by several of the best known college presidents. Out of 246 letters from college presidents not more than three indicate that they think students drink because of prohibition.

ANDALUSIA

On Wednesday evening a meeting was held at the home of Harry Oliver for the purpose of having a Scout troop in Andalusia. Robert X. Perry, the assistant executive, gave a fine talk on Scouting which was very interesting, and it enthused the Scout Committee to the extent that it looks as though Andalusia will have a real live Scout Troop. The committee is as follows: Mr. Vickers, scoutmaster, Harry Oliver and Forrest Jackson, assisting as organizers; Harry Oliver, chairman; Mr. Kaiser, publicity man; Mr. Knoll, outdoorman; Mr. Jackson, advancement man, and Mr. Curtis, record man.

Everybody is going with the Men's Club of the Church of the Redeemer to the Odd Fellows' Hall in Hulmeville, Wednesday, June 18th. The Men's Club is going to put on a minstrel show for the Odd Fellows, exactly the same show as they put on at the church some time ago. For the benefit of those who will want to go to Hulmeville to see the show the Men's Club has arranged to have automobiles waiting at the Church to take anyone free of charge.

Bristol Scouts Collect Many Sharp Objects

26,424 pieces of glass or other sharp objects was the net result of the punctureless campaign carried out by the Boy Scouts in Bristol on Saturday.

Troop Commissioner Burtonwood assigned each troop in Bristol to certain streets, so as to cover the entire borough. The boys under the leadership of troop boy officers branched out to their respective district and befriended every automobile owner in Bristol by removing from the highways 26,424 sharp objects.

Community Good Turn Day is a Bucks County Council, Boy Scouts of America, Scout holiday. It is a day that is used by every Scout in the county to show his appreciation to his community by doing a good turn to his neighborhood. The net result of last Saturday's activity was the removing of a large quantity of glass and other sharp objects.

The gross result of this campaign was: Stimulating community consciousness within the boy; cultivating leadership in the boy officers; objects removed totaling 26,424; utilizing the greater part of the day advantageously; the knowledge of what to do with refuse and debris; serving.

RECOVER ONE MORE BODY FROM POOL AT SOUDERTON

Divers and Volunteers Work
All Night During Storm;
Efforts Hampered

CAR IS NOT RECOVERED

SOUDERTON, Pa., June 10.—(INS)—Despite the efforts of two Philadelphia navy yard divers and a group of volunteers who worked all night through a blinding rainstorm in an effort to retrieve the automobile which carried seven Philadelphians to their death in an abandoned quarry pool near here, the car still rested on the bottom of the pool this morning.

Another body was recovered, however, bringing the total now brought to the surface to three.
The bodies of two women victims, Mrs. Emma Wisam, 69, and Mrs. Ella Wisam, 42, her daughter-in-law, both of Germantown, were found floating on the surface of the water yesterday. The body of Harold Wisam, 11, of Glenside, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Wisam, who also met death in the accident, was brought to the surface early this morning.

The bodies of his parents, Ralph Cupitt, 44, the driver, and Thelma Nabors, 3-year old daughter of a neighbor of the Wisam family, are still hidden in the murky waters of the deep pit.
County Detectives Stevenson, of Montgomery County, and Lieut. E. C. Craig, of the Navy Yard, are in charge of the diving operations. The quarry is about 30 miles north and west of Philadelphia on the Souderton-Hatfield Road about a mile south of Souderton.

The seven victims left Philadelphia Sunday to visit Mrs. Leidy Cressman, a sister of Mrs. Emma Wisam, at Teledorf, but failed to arrive at their destination. While rounding a sharp curve their car plunged over the 30-foot embankment into the old quarry hole filled with 50 feet of water.

No trace of the motorists were found until shortly before noon yesterday when a truck driver saw the body of one of the women floating on the surface together with the straw hats of two men. An investigation revealed the other woman which has been recovered and a search of the pool was ordered when Mrs. Cressman identified the bodies.

HULMEVILLE

Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Church will conduct the June business meeting at the residence of Mrs. Emma Vansant, Main street, tonight. On Saturday evening Messrs. Jesse C. Everitt, Horace Cox, James P. Hellings, Charles Haefner and Allen Vansant were dinner guests of Rev. and Mrs. Walter H. Canon, of Paoli, later attending session of the Past Grands' Association, I. O. O. F. order, with the Paoli lodge being the host.

The Women's Home Missionary Society of the M. E. Church will meet tomorrow afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles Haefner.

Two teams were selected at the monthly business meeting of the Epworth League last evening, the groups to vie for honors in raising the finances during the next three months. The contest will end with the September meeting, after which the group raising the largest amount will be treated by the other side. The leaders of the one side are Misses Harriet Cox and Marie Hanson; with Samuel Hibbs and Arthur Kauffman leading the second team. In the year's program outlined there were also: Musical in October; visits to shut-ins under direction of third department, during November; Christmas work in December.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Fries and Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Jackson and Elaine and "Sonny" spent Sunday afternoon visiting Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Huey, of Siles.

SOVIET REGIME OF JOSEF STALIN KNOWS HOW TO USE THE GLOVED HAND AS WELL ALSO AS THE MAILED FIST IN CONTROLLING THE PEOPLE

It was Demonstrated to Group of Newspapermen Who Recently Made 7,000-Mile Tour of Southeastern Russian Turkestan to See Opening of New R. R.

This is the first of a series of four articles written by Edward L. Deuss, I. N. S. correspondent in Moscow, who was one of a party of American newspaper correspondents who made a 7,000 mile journey through mysterious Southeastern Russian-Turkestan.

Mr. Deuss, in addition to telling us something of the present day aspect of this strange and drama-steeped land, gives us an insight into the methods by which the rulers of the Kremlin are bringing the wild peoples of this region under its sway.

By Edward L. Deuss

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
MOSCOW, June 10.—The Soviet regime of Josef Stalin knows how to use the gloved hand, as well as the mailed fist.

This was demonstrated as a fact to the group of newspapermen who recently made the 7,000 mile tour of Southeastern Russian Turkestan to witness the ceremonies of opening the new Turk-Sib railway—the artery of steel which is to tap the riches and resources of the "fabulous East," for Moscow.

To demonstrate the achievement of Soviet engineering skill, initiative and power—and the building of the Turk-Sib railway stands as no mean testimony to such—the gates of forbidden Turkestan opened. For the first time in history a group of newspapermen obtained permission, under the guidance of a Foreign Office official, on a special train equipped with a diner and a refrigerator car filled with food and water (incidentally beer and wine), to snoop around unmolested in this land of mystery, blood, pestilence and Islamic culture.

Alexander the Great conquered it in 328 B. C. The Mongol hordes of Genghis Khan sacked and pillaged Turkestan's riches in the early 13th century. The Tartars under Tamerlane, shedding rivers of blood, raised it to magnificence. The Russians took it with more bloodshed in 1880, and the Bolsheviks subdued it again in 1921.

If there is a spot on earth that measures up to the most grandiose expectations it is Turkestan with its Samarkand, Bokhara and a host of other ancient cities. No wonder that the flowering oases of this desert gem of Moslem Asia were drenched with

SEVEN FROM COUNTY GRADUATE AT STATE

Six Hundred and Seventeen Receive Diplomas At Exercises Today

MANY WERE PRESENT

STATE COLLEGE, June 10.—Six hundred and seventeen young men and women were graduated from the Pennsylvania State College in the 70th annual June commencement exercises this morning, the largest class in the history of the institution. President Ralph D. Hetzel also awarded 50 advanced degrees, including seven technical and two doctorates.

The Hon. Franklin Spencer Edmonds, of Philadelphia, was the commencement speaker, taking for his subject, "The New Liberalism." Mr. Edmonds is a prominent attorney who has been connected with the modern educational movement for a number of years. The commencement procession was the most imposing ever held here. Forming in front of the Carnegie Library the long column wound over the campus to the Recreation Hall where a record crowd of over 2,000 guests was assembled.

First scholastic honors went to 24 young women and 37 to men who represented the ten per cent ranking highest in scholarship for four years. Second honors went to 15 girls and to 49 men. No prizes or scholarships were announced today, having been awarded on Scholarship Day in May. Winners of the largest prizes, three John W. White Fellowships carrying $600 each for graduate study, were James T. Wolfe, Sewickley; Archibald W. Johnston, State College; and Arthur C. Sugden, Wilkes-Barre.

There were 193 graduates from the School of Engineering; 135 from the School of Liberal Arts; 129 from the School of Education; 95 from the School of Agriculture; 51 from the School of Chemistry and Physics; and 23 from the School of Mineral Industries. Degrees given were 417 Bachelors of Science, and 200 Bachelors of Art.

Commissions as second lieutenants in the United States Army Reserve were presented to forty-five seniors who had completed the Penn State R. O. T. C. training. Twenty of the commissions signed by President Hoover went to infantry officers and twenty-five to engineers. Two who must wait until they are twenty-one years of age to obtain their commissions received certificates.

Following the commencement exercises Dr. Edmonds and trustees were guests at a College Senate luncheon. Sixty-five of the sixty-seven counties in the State were represented in the graduating class, Juniata and Pike Counties alone having no students in this year's class.

Those from Bucks County were as follows: Claude S. Bryan, Perkaskie, dairy husbandry, School of Agriculture. Samuel J. Fisher, Perkaskie, agricultural biochemistry, School of Agriculture.

Edward S. McCormick, Perkaskie, civil engineering, School of Engineering. Ada Elizabeth Hughes, Reigelville, bachelor of arts in education, School of Education.

Earl B. Wilkins, Andalusia, bachelor of arts in education, School of Education. Howard J. Eymann, Edgewood, civil engineering, School of Engineering. James H. Cornell, Churchville, bachelor of science in education, School of Education.

PUBLISHERS TO AID FRANKLIN MEMORIAL

Men of Bucks and Montgomery Contribute Toward
Fund Being Raised

URGE OTHERS TO ASSIST

Members of the Bucks-Montgomery Newspaper Association voted to make a contribution of $250 toward the Benjamin Franklin Memorial which is to be erected in Philadelphia.

The publishers met Saturday in the Hotel Adelphi, Philadelphia. The gift made in honor of Franklin, the father of the craft in America, was inspired in part by the fact that the association was honoring the attainment of 55 years in active publication of the newspaper founded by E. S. Moser, publisher of the Collegeville Independent.

Mr. Moser made a brief speech in which he told of some of his experiences during the early days of newspaper publishing. Charles Meredith, Sr., Quakertown Free Press, spoke of his early associations with Mr. Moser, and of the contribution Mr. Moser had made to journalism.

Mr. Moser is the oldest publisher in point of actual service in the State. He is 73 years old and founded the Independent in 1875.

It was agreed to forward a letter with the Franklin contribution to the general committee, urging that body to call upon all local, state and national associations similar to the contributors, to make a donation to the fund.

FILIPPO MUST LEAVE BUCKS COUNTY NOW

Judge Keller Orders Notorious Character to Sell His Property

SUSPENDS JAIL TERM

DOYLESTOWN, June 10.—"It does no good to send you to jail; that means nothing to you," Judge Hiram H. Keller told the notorious Nicholas Filippow, of Warrington township, reputed to be Bucks county's "biggest bootlegger" in quantity and in size.

The statement was made yesterday when Filippow, who last week surrendered to police, pleaded guilty before Judge Keller to a charge of possessing and manufacturing liquor at his farm where State Police made two raids in two days recently and discovered 650 gallons of liquor in addition to a complete manufacturing and storage plant in secret rooms under the garage and under the living room of the house. Since the raid, Filippow has been missing. Last week he surrendered.

Judge Keller ordered Filippow to get out of Bucks county within sixty days and placed a prison sentence of three years over his head to keep that order. A fine of $500 and costs was imposed upon Filippow. Deputy Sheriff Horace E. Gwinner was named probation officer to see to it that Filippow sold his farm and leaves Bucks county never to return within the three-year suspended prison sentence.

Filippow is no stranger in Bucks county criminal courts. He served three months before for violating the liquor laws when State Police raided his farm. He has been before the police courts of several states and has a long record.

He was accompanied to Doylestown by a number of well known Philadelphia politicians who acted in his behalf when it came to raising the fine money.

"Your farm in Warrington township must be put to a better use," Judge Keller informed Filippow. The defendant told the Court that his farm was being sold and that no member of his family would have anything to do with it. The farm is owned by Filippow's wife.

John L. DuBois, of Doylestown, attorney for Filippow, assured Judge Keller that he would see to it that Filippow left Bucks county, and on that condition the prison sentence of three years was suspended.

Frank Kentopp, of Doylestown, was granted a parole by Judge Keller upon payment of a fine and costs. Kentopp, well known locally, was sentenced to not less than six or more than twelve months in the county prison for violating the liquor laws.

Kentopp informed Judge Keller that "the run had soaked out of him and that he would never again get into trouble over liquor."

"You are an excellent mechanic and there is no reason why you should not go out now and make good," Judge Keller told Kentopp. "If you get drunk within the next three months while you are under probation you will be brought back to serve the remainder of the sentence."

Louis Irwin, of Yardley, who was sentenced by the late Judge Ryan to serve not less than two or more than four years for breaking and entering a store at Neshaminy Falls was granted a parole by Judge Keller. Irwin served a little less than two years. He was described as a "model prisoner."

Clement Goodman, forty, of Philadelphia, was refused a parole by Judge Keller. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $500 and costs and serve four months in the county prison for violating the liquor laws the third time in Bucks county.

GUILD TO MEET

The Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's Chapel, Edgely, will conduct a strawberry festival on the chapel lawn Thursday evening, June 12th. Delicious strawberries are promised, with ice cream and cake.

COUNCILMEN SAY SPEED LAWS ARE TO BE ENFORCED

Police Will Make Arrests and Traffic Lights Must Be Obeyed

A WARNING IS GIVEN

Fireworks Display Prohibited
Within Limits of The Borough

There was a general and free discussion in Borough Council last night about the speeding of motorists on Radcliffe street and the utter disregard that some out-of-town motorists are showing for the traffic light at Monroe street and Farragut avenue.

It was made plain that while Council does not desire to have wholesale arrests made, yet the police are going to enforce the speed laws and the traffic rules in general with an iron hand.

Speeding must cease and the traffic lights must be obeyed. These rules are to be enforced and Burgess Anderson told Council that he had taken the question up with employers, to so warn their employees.

Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, asked Council to grant permission for a pyrotechnic display within the confines of the borough on July 4th. This was refused due to the fact that there is an ordinance which strictly prohibits the discharge of fireworks in Bristol.

"More and more towns are every day prohibiting the discharge of fireworks in towns and cities," said Burgess Anderson. He suggested that Sullivan's field was but a step from Bristol and then there would be no danger. "We have a town of practically all frame construction," he commented.

Police committee reported the officers made 38 arrests during the month and that the following dispositions had been made of the cases:

Held for court, 9; discharged, 12; fined, 15; committed, 2. Twenty-eight lodgers were given shelter, 15 street lights were reported out, and one door was found open.

The report was received and filed. Permission to erect signs in front of 513 Bath street and 103 Cedar street was referred to Street and Highway Committee with power to act.

Communication was received from Robert Bracken Post expressing appreciation for the contribution toward the proper celebration of Memorial Day.

Philadelphia Electric Company was given permission to place a governor beneath the surface of Jefferson avenue and thus eliminate the one on Pond street near Jefferson avenue.

Richard T. Myers reported that the Street and Highway Committee had received a 12-ton gasoline roller instead of a 10-ton roller and that it had been unloaded.

President of Council, Dr. J. Fred Wagner, forwarded a communication in which he advised Council that he would be unable to be present at last night's meeting due to the fact that he would be out of town. Jacob C. Schmidt, Sr., was made president pro tem.

Seventeen Boys At Scout Roll Call

NEWPORTVILLE, June 10.—Seventeen boys answered the roll call at the meeting last week of the Newportville Boy Scout troop, the largest turnout noted since organization.

Albert Martin was elected scribe of the group. The attendance showed that close to 100 per cent of the membership turned out for inspection by Robert X. Perry, assistant Scout executive of the county.

Scoutmaster Frank Unangst announced that work will start on the camp Saturday morning, and it is expected the group will be under canvas by night. The boys will be assisted in the work by members of an associated troop from Philadelphia, who will be their guests over the week-end.

The local lads have done well in their work at the meetings.

Newportville Firemen Meet and Name Officers

NEWPORTVILLE, June 10.—The monthly meeting of Newportville Fire Company No. 1 was held in the fire house on Thursday evening.

GASOLINE INSPECTORS

Hundreds of millions of dollars are spent for gasoline in a year, and most of it with eyes shut. The motorist is acquainted with certain standard brands and chooses those which have given him satisfaction. But the extent to which "hoodlegging" of gasoline exists often makes it a gamble whether he is getting the kind of "gas" the sign promises. Unscrupulous dealers may, and do, put into their tanks inferior products and retail them under superior names; and at some stations the only label on the tank is "gas."

State inspections guarantee honest measure in most states, but the only guarantee of quality is the dealer's integrity. The Mississippi legislature has added to that guarantee in its state that of a "pure food law" for gasoline.

Under this precedent-setting statute, the dealer must label the gas and publicly post a statement of its quality and the state will see, by periodic inspections, that the labels and posting are honest.

Thus do a few crooked tradesmen impose upon the taxpayers of their state another tax burden, for state inspectors draw salaries and have expense accounts and cannot operate without a bureau with more salaries and expenses.

Perhaps motorists in other states can avoid this new tax burden by patronizing reputable and responsible service stations, which usually are easily distinguishable from the other sort.

THE DOLLAR BUYS MORE

Responsible for much mischief and no little confusion has been the familiar phrase "the 60-cent dollar." A fairly large body of citizens imagined that something had happened to the dollar itself; that the value of the dollar had depreciated as the currency of Europe depreciated after the war with such disastrous results. As an actual fact, the expression merely meant the post-war dollar was buying only 60 cents worth of goods on the basis of the 1913 price level.

Of late, the accuracy of the phrase, even as a figure of speech, has been seriously shaken. The index numbers of average prices are now based on 1926 as par, instead of on 1913, which establishes a present dollar of 113 1/2 cents on the rating of 1926. And on the basis of the 1913 level of prices the 1930 dollar will buy 74 cents worth.

If there has been confusion in comparing price levels, it has been because people will not confine themselves to language which describes what has actually happened.

In the wild commodity speculation of 1921 and 1922 forced them to a point only 38 per cent above pre-war average. The sweeping reaction of 1921 and 1922 forced them to a point only 38 per cent above pre-war. Three years later the difference averaged nearly 60 per cent; now it is approximately 35 per cent.

The trouble with love at first sight is second thought.

What we need is a child labor law to keep them from working their parents to death.

News From Towns Adjacent to Bristol As Reported by Correspondents

TORRESDALE MANOR

On Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clermont celebrated their silver wedding anniversary with a very large reception given at their home on Edgewood avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Clermont were married again by Rev. J. M. Tweedale. The bride was presented to Mrs. Clermont by Mrs. George Knoll. Mrs. Clermont also received 25 American Beauty roses from a niece who was unable to attend. Mr. and Mrs. Clermont received some very gorgeous gifts, among those were cracker and cheese plates, bon bon dishes, bird bath, flowers, Bunnies, and the Ladies' Pinchle Club members and their husbands, of Torresdale Manor, presented handsome coffee serving set, consisting of a silver coffee urn, a silver cream pitcher and a silver sugar bowl and serving tray. The house and grounds were beautifully decorated with flowers; the grounds were strung with electric lights of many beautiful colors. The supper was enjoyed by everyone. Those present were: Rev. J. George Knoll was toastmaster. Several speeches were made. Mr. and Mrs. Clermont had as their attendants the same bridesmaid and best man who attended them 25 years ago. All of Mr. and Mrs. Clermont's friends wish them health, wealth and happiness.

ness until their golden anniversary. "Ann Marie" Foster is back with us again after touring the United States. All her friends welcome her home.

Mrs. Otto Delheim spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. Clermont, of Edgewood avenue.

WEST BRISTOL

Mrs. Joseph Lister is entertaining her aunt from Philadelphia for some time.

The last meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the chapel took place at the residence of Mrs. Harry Wagner. At the next session the women will gather in the church basement, when a covered dish social will be a feature. This next meeting, June 19th, will be the final one for the season.

A group of men of the Newport Road Community Chapel will meet in the chapel basement Thursday evening of this week. An electric light will be installed for the occasion, and all men are welcome.

The Children's Day exercises last Sunday evening were much enjoyed at the chapel. The tots took their parts well, and the program was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number present. The edifice was tastefully decorated with flowers.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Bowers and daughter Edna, and Mr. and Mrs. McGee, of Philadelphia, spent Sunday at the chapel. On Saturday evening Mr. Bowers entertained Mr. and Mrs. "Dick" Stevens and daughter, of Hatboro.

The strawberry festival on June 14 at 6 o'clock on the chapel lawn, promises to be an enjoyable affair. In case of unfavorable weather the festival will take place inside the chapel. A play will be staged by a group of folks from Philadelphia in the evening at about 8:30. An offering will be taken.

Mrs. Wilkinson has the sympathy of the community in the loss of her sister, Mrs. Mahlor, who died last week.

SYNOPSIS

Dawn, mystery girl in the little settlement in the British East African Protectorate, is between two fires. One is from the black natives, determined that she shall become the mystic bride of the god Malungu. The other is from Step Keyes, feared chieftain, who holds sway over black and white alike, and who has interrupted the ritual and temporarily dispersed the mob. Dawn has heard that her father was English, but she believes she is half black. The Germans, under Captain Eric, have seized the British camp; Young Tom Allen is among the prisoners of war. He overhears enough to convince him that Dawn is of pure white stock.

INSTALLMENT SIX

Another "Achtung!" arrested further petitions. The captain then gently explained that he would require some time to decide just which of the prisoners were most deserving of release.

"And do not," he concluded, "set your hearts on going, for there will be only ten. I'll name them later."

This occasioned groans of dismay among the mean and dour predictions from the chronically luckless that they were likely to remain in Africa forever. Meantime, Eric stroled over to join Tom who alone had not petitioned the German officer to include him among the ten. "Your heart is singing Helmwach? You think of England, nicht wahr?"

Tom was a prisoner of war

"Your Helmwach," rejoined Tom, "is my home. Sweet home. But the war has just begun."

It relieved Eric to have this assurance that Tom had no intention of demanding a place among the released ten. It made it easier for him to speak. "Before the war we were neighbors," he said, grasping Tom's shoulders affectionately, "and good friends, too, Tom. Is it not so?"

Tom nodded in cordial agreement. "We still are good friends, Eric."

"That's just what I wanted to talk about, Tom," said Eric, quick to rid of himself of what he feared would be an unpleasant task. "It is my duty to keep you here, and it is your duty, as my friend, not to complain."

Eric was conscious of having phrased his speech awkwardly, and Tom, quick to appreciate his friend's position, indicated that he understood thoroughly. By this time the other prisoners were gathering around the officer, suspicious that Tom might be gaining some extra favor. Pigeon arrived in time to overhear Eric's last remark.

"You ain't never thought I was your friend, have you, Captain?" he asked hopefully.

"I can't let the best rubber expert in Africa return to German's enemy," Eric continued to Tom, ignoring Pigeon's interruption. "I must send away the useless ones."

"What a break for you, Duke," commented a solid prisoner to the devotee of grouse-shooting.

Pigeon was determined to press his own campaign. "Captain Eric," he said earnestly, "I ain't done a stroke of work since I was captured—so 'elp me."

Tom came to Eric's rescue. "Captain Eric will select the ten men without our help, boys," he said. "Back up. There are worse places in the world than Africa."

That bald assertion invoked a polite but unmistakable murmur of disagreement. Napoli, with true Sicilian vehemence, announced that he doubted it. Pigeon, shocked to find that an Englishman could be guilty of such a statement, retreated in disgust and disappointment.

"Worse place than Africa, sure," went on Napoli, "but shess not in this world." His forefinger pointed downward to indicate the general direction of a place presumed to be less desirable than Africa.

Tom disagreed. "Maybe," he suggested, "those who go back won't be the lucky ones." He, too, gravely pointed downward. A couple of prisoners laughed uneasily. There was altogether too much reference to regions below. "I don't think," began one doubtfully.

"That's the stuff, Buddy," advised a saturnine American. "Don't think—an' they'll send you home."

The grumbling among the men persisted. It was harmless, but it disturbed Eric. He restated Tom's assertion that there were worse places than Africa, and invited all of them to have a drink. An amused observer of the proceedings was Blink, an American who had served as foreman on Tom's plantation. Since the release order in no manner involved him, it was all a matter of indifference to him who went home, just so the Duke was one of them. Blink noted the Duke's stratum below the natives, a depth hitherto untouched by anything human, as he estimated it.

A shrewd fellow was Blink. He was intensely devoted to Tom, both as employee and friend, and perhaps knew more about him than anybody in the settlement. He knew Tom never would take advantage of Eric's friendship to obtain passage to England, but he knew, too, that Tom would go unconplainingly, so ordered.

"Any way can see why Tom ain't crazy to sit back to London fogs," he observed idly to a group of prisoners. Tom overheard, just as Blink had intended him to. He raised his glass in unspoken toast to Dawn, winked at Blink and sauntered off.

There came suddenly to Blink a salvo of rhetoric clothed in a faultless Pictadilly accent. Quickly translating it into the more comprehensible jargon of the jungle, he discovered that it concerned him. Duke was discussing him with Pigeon.

"I ask you, Pigeon," said the Duke, "why should an American treat an Englishman so contemptuously in Africa. After all, we are fighting together amicably in Europe, you know."

"If yer talkin' about Blinky," advised Pigeon, "don't mind 'im. 'E don't mean nothin'."

"What'd you mean—I don't mean nothin'?" Blink interrupted. "I mean so much it'd take him three days to say it."

Duke sought defense in polysyllables. He managed to call Blink an "illiterate companion in calamity" before that gentleman closed in on him somewhat brusquely. Blink couldn't be certain that he had been called anything he wasn't, but he was affronted by the Duke's tone.

"Take that windshield out of your eye and listen," he invited, indicating the Duke's monocle and assuming a stance favored by Jack Dempsey. The Duke elected to keep the monocle firmly in his eye. Blink thereupon thrust his face close to Duke's and hissed, if hard consonants can be hissed: "Lay off my girl!"

This abrupt order gave the Duke something of a start. "Your girl?" he ejaculated. "Why—why you colossal imbecile, you—"

"What's the good o' talkin' to 'im?" reasoned the Cockney. "When every word shows 'is 'igh-breeding." Pigeon wandered off, renouncing Duke with a sweeping gesture. But Blink was still denied a cherished punch at Duke. Tom held him back.

"Why can't you let Duke alone?" Tom asked.

"He ain't show me no respect," complained Blink. "He forgets that you and I are the bosses of this gang."

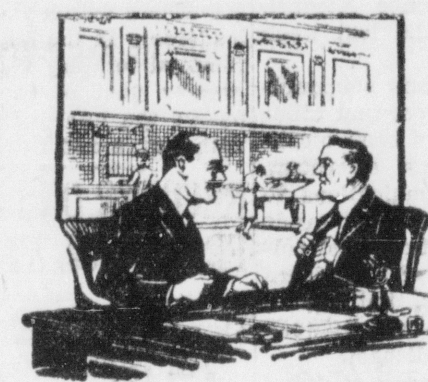

"When we're on the rubber plantation we're in charge," Tom agreed, "but here we're just prisoners like the rest."

Duke emitted a triumphant snort. "Just a prisoner, blob. Get it?" Tom put an end to the squabble by counselling the Duke to keep out of Blink's path and by suggesting to Blink that he betake himself somewhere to.

Meantime, Pigeon had gone in quest of romance. He had found among the natives an exceptionally pretty girl who had promised to meet him in the shade of the canteen. This trust gave the Cockney immense satisfaction, as the girl had been especially favored by Shep. Pigeon felt he owed it to himself to rob the whip man of one sweet heart, anyway. He would be repaid for the public humiliation Shep had subjected him to.

The native girl was more attractively costumed than was ordinarily the case when Pigeon joined her at the appointed time and place. She explained to him that she had been selected as Dawn's maid in the temple, and was thus privileged to garb herself more gaily than her sisters. Pigeon was about to utter some appropriate commentary on her radiance when the menacing shadow of Shep fell between him and the girl. The girl with a glad cry, seized Shep in embrace.

DIDN'T KNOW BABE RUTHBy Bill Corum
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, June 10.—Some years ago when Mr. George Bernard Shaw, the vegetarian, was asked what he thought of Babe Ruth, he wisecracked back:

"Whose baby is Ruth?"

It wasn't a very good wisecrack. Bugs Beer would never have let it appear under his signature. But coming from the great vegetarian it made all the first pages, and I presume rattled many a dutiful chuckle from the consciously literary. The consciously literary will laugh at anything so long as the right person says it.

Weak as it was, however, Mr. Shaw's very little joke came back to me as I watched Babe Herman slash his sixth home run of the season into the circus seats at Ebbets' Field.

Whose baby is Herman?

He's nobody's baby, Mr. Bones.

Here he is about the best hitter in the National League, the home run king at an assault and battery team in a baseball crazy city and the most aggressive tobacco chewer on a club where chewing and spitting (ah there, McCann, old fellow) remains a fine art, and what does it get him?

Do you see any signs in Jersey with a picture of the handsome Floyd, one cheek stuck out like the kid that's been to the painless dentist, alongside some such reading matter as this: "Babe Herman chews our honey-dew dipped, sorghum soaked barley beef cut plug, and calls it sweeter than sweet?" You do not.

Do you hear any dinner hour broadcasts in which Brooklyn's Babe drowns out the soap singers from here to the Mississippi with the story of how he knocks that old umpire suspected for the Duke of York, Alderman Steve McKeever and Gillenbreen, the mad batter of Manhattan? You do not.

And are readers of the sports pages, and aren't we all, regaled each day with Mr. Herman's intimate opinion on the modern flapper, long skirts for knock-kneed ladies, and the five-power naval treaty, in that telling literary style which made Floyd a stand-out in the fifth grade? Once more, I regret to say that the answer is "No."

The whole truth and nothing but so help me is that Herman has been something of a joke—and this goes for many rabid Robin rooters—to everybody except our own Garry Schumacher, Jeremiah Francis Looney, and the pitchers of the National League. Even if Floyd was twice as comical as he is, and he is pretty comical when he starts stealing bases which are already occupied and running in circles under high flies, the pitchers of the National League wouldn't appreciate him.

Over in the Brooklyn press box they say the reason Schumacher has clung so tenaciously to the Babe is that their ancestors were wont to run around together through the Black Forest throwing coconuts at ground squirrels. Never having been in the Black Forest with anybody's ancestors, or even their wives and sweethearts, I wouldn't know about that. But I do know that when nobody else had a kind word for the eagle bird of the Robin slingers, Garry was around telling me that he was destined to be the greatest hitter on the John Arnold Heydler wheel.

"Boy, how he can bust 'em!" Garry would say, chuckling all over at his own mind picture of the Great Herman knocking the palms loose from Charley Stoneham's Polo Ground fences.

And bust 'em Floyd certainly can. I don't think he is properly appreciated yet, but he will be. It's the old story of giving a dog a bad name. The fans have grown so accustomed to laughing at, and with Babe that they don't stop to recognize his true worth to Uncle Robbie's team. But he is improving all the time in every department of play and if Brooklyn should win the pennant, which it may, we shall see another goat transformed into a hero overnight.

In the meantime Babe can go on hitting for "Schummie" and Jeremiah and, not that it matters greatly for me, I think he is one of the few underrated and under-publicized ball-players about.

But if Herman is coming through like a champ for Schumacher, the Robins are in a fair way of making a bum prophet out of my other co-worker, George Herman Ruth.

If my memory is correct, and I think it is, Ruth picked the Flock to finish a swooning seventh. This selection, appearing on these pages, so roused Your Uncle Wilbert Robinson that words were banded back and forth between the two great men prior to one of the exhibition games between the Yanks and Robins in the Stadium.

Your Uncle Wilbert Robinson was right peeved at the fancied insult and offered to bet our fat reporter that his team would finish higher in its league than the Yanks would in theirs. Nothing but some rather blunt sarcasm came of the conversation, but you may be sure that Your Uncle Wilbert Robinson will not fail to call Babe's attention to the fact if his birds continue to soar.

However, the fine showing of the Brooklyn team to-date vindicates the majority of the experts. It was generally picked to be a much improved team and it certainly is; so much improved that it stands as much chance as anybody right now to take the whole pot. If Robbie can install his players with this belief—that they are strong pennant contenders—and keep them fighting they will be hard to beat.

Everything depends on the willingness of the pitchers to keep themselves in good condition and deliver to the last ounce. The ability of the team to hit is unquestioned. These fellows will hit if they do nothing else.

Once more I repeat several earlier warnings—Look out for this battering Brooklyn Brigade!

EVOLVE NEW METHODS OF TESTING MOTOR CARS

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 10.—A more modern and practical form of competitive test has been evolved by the California State Department of Motor Patrol to measure the mettle of men and motor cars used in running down the hard-driving, quick-shooting modern bandit and gangster. Instead of clearing off and measuring a paved stretch over which to put prospective new patrol cars through their paces, all automobiles are now tested at high speed on a main highway during peak traffic periods—the exact conditions under which they do most of the important work of apprehending law-breakers on the highways.

As a result of a recent series of tests under this plan, an order for 10 Dodge Brothers Eight-in-Line coupes was placed by the motor patrol department. Each competing car was taken out on the highway near Sacramento and driven a measured 10 miles through traffic at the best speed it could maintain. The responsiveness of the car to the wishes of the driver counted as much as the power ability of the motor. All cars were run first against and then with the wind, and graded on an average of the speed made in both directions.

The official motor patrol department records show that the Dodge Eight-in-Line averaged 84 miles an hour running with the wind and 71 miles an hour against the wind, an average for both directions of 77.5 miles an hour. Stop watches, instead of the speedometers on the cars, were used to check the time. The Dodge Eight, it is said, were chosen solely on the basis of their satisfactory performance. Although the call for bids expressly specified cars without rumble seats, all Dodges selected have rumble seats—the only cars out of 81 in state motor patrol work with that equipment.

In their reports on the test, motorcycle officers who followed the cars as observers stated that the flexibility of the motor, the responsiveness of the four-wheel hydraulic brakes and the roadability due to lower center of gravity were the main factors in enabling the Dodge to qualify for the exacting requirements of motor patrol work, in spite of the objections to rumble seats.

GAME POSTPONED

Rain last night caused the postponement of the Emille-Independents game. Tonight, if weather permits, St. Ann's will play the A. O. H. nine. Croydon Boys' Club has released Albert Check, Clarence Hamma, and Pompeio Piazza and signed Ralph Stromp, James Parella and James Jackson.

DREAD NEURITIS
YIELDS QUICKLY
TO NEW KONJOLA

Man Glad to Indorse This Medicine That Ended
Terrible Pains

MR. HARRY J. SCHREIBER

"I have been benefited so much by Konjola that I am glad to indorse it," said Mr. Harry J. Schreiber, Route No. 2, Glenshaw, Pa. "I suffered terribly from neuritis in my right arm, shoulder and back. I tried many medicines without relief. The pain was intense and I could not lie on my right side for two months. Walking was very difficult."

"My father recommended Konjola and I started the treatment. I had a wonderful experience. I have completed four bottles and haven't an ache or pain in my body. My appetite has increased and I enjoy sound, restful sleep. I haven't had a touch of neuritis since I completed the fourth bottle."

When given a fair trial, of from four to eight bottles, Konjola will produce amazing results when all else tried had failed.

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate Store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

"OUR FLAG"

It's a great old Flag,
It's a grand old Flag,
It's a dear old Flag to me.
As each fold unfurls
To the morning air,
It speaks of Liberty.
Let nothing mar
One stripe or star;
Let each emblem
Live in you.
Then raise it high
To the morning sky,
Its spirit to imbue.

human blood by warriors who rightly believed their empires incomplete without this pearl. And no wonder, too, that the seven and a half million decadent descendants today crave to be left alone to live in peace.

Turkistan is still in the hands of what the natives call "outsiders." The Bolshevik Russians are, however, outsiders of a new sort, using different methods and force of arms when necessary. The Red penetration—imperialism if one is disposed to call it such—is political, economic and ideological. No great power, capitalistic or communistic, has attempted heretofore to hold a portion of the Mohammedan world and at the same time make its people believe in what the dominant power believed. All have penetrated economically and politically but not ideologically.

Politically the Bolsheviks have played their strongest card because they covet the toiling masses of all the world as their class brothers. Moscow and the communists in Turkistan do not look down on the natives. The unattached Russians do. And the natives in return don't think much of any Russian Communists or non-Communists. But at least the natives can't very well resent an outstretched right hand and the call of "brother."

Turkistan wisely is not regarded as a colony of Soviet Russia. It has been divided into three native Soviet socialist republics—Uzbekistan, the largest, with its capital at Samarkand; Turkmenistan with its capital at Ashkabad; and since last October Tadzhikistan with its capital at Stalinabad, formerly Dushanbe. The natives have the same civil and political rights as any in the Soviet Union. The disfranchised classes are the economic class enemies, like priests, former landowners and employers of labor as in other parts of the Union.

Economically the Soviets appear to have been less successful in winning the sympathy of Turkestan, though their methods are far more gentle than in Russia proper. Private tradesmen have been driven out of business less ruthlessly. Many of them have been allowed to keep their little craftsman shops. The collectivized farm movement is pushed more slowly also than in the rest of Russia.

Lack of sufficient funds is partially responsible for the slow tempo of industrialization and the creation of a proletarian class. The inhabitants would seem difficult to industrialize. They have always worked alone in the fields, in the bazaars or in their half-open shops and courtyards spinning silk, weaving rugs, drying fruit and hammering metal utensils.

Despite the use of the gloved hand however, there have been a number of uprisings. It was difficult to get at the facts. In one place officials admitted disturbance, but explained it as a mere barroom brawl. In Tashkent a few weeks before our arrival there was a mysterious public funeral for "heroes who died for the cause of socialism." It was common knowledge that the two Red army soldiers who were buried, died fighting rebellious peasants. Farther into the interior 70 combatants were reported killed in a pitched battle between rebels and Red troops.

Probably the least success has been achieved in changing the beliefs of the inhabitants. The notable exception appears to be the struggle for emancipation of women, especially as regards the removal of the "paranja," or veil. The socialist cultural work is making strides. There are more than double the number of schools and treble the number of pupils as under the Czarist administration. The Uzbekistan state printing office is flooding the land with pamphlets in native tongues. Russian is the first foreign language requirement in the schools. The developments in Turkistan will be interesting. It affords the one practical demonstration of how Moscow will rule individual states and nationalities entirely foreign to it in the dreamed of and hoped for world federation of soviet socialist republics.

It's modernized . . .

by Vacuum's Process of distillation

By the Makers of Mobiloil

THERE'S a good reason why it's worth your while to switch to Mobilgas. Here it is . . . Motors are different today from what they were a few years ago. They are livelier, speedier—and, by the same token, more exacting in their fuel requirements. The car you drive today needs an up-to-date gasoline.

So the makers of Mobiloil have introduced Mobilgas—a brand-new gasoline, modernized by Vacuum's Process of distillation.

Join the army of progressive people who are switching to Mobilgas. Your car needs it. You'll like it. And it doesn't cost a penny more.
